

Center for Visual Artists Mission

Organization Mission: The Center for Visual Artists (CVA) is a non-profit organization that supports emerging artists of all ages through educational programs, exhibition opportunities, and community outreach.

Organization Vision Statement: Through education and exhibition programs, the CVA builds and strengthens bonds within the Greensboro community and enables anyone at any skill level to engage and experience the arts. We believe that the visual arts can be used as a tool for personal and social development.

Our program of work grows from our efforts to create opportunities for families to participate in the arts and local artists to share their talents with others. The CVA strives to foster the education of families through the visual arts and engage our diverse community. The desired outcome for our organization is to ensure that there are visual art offerings in Greensboro that are approachable, accessible, and affordable.

Organization History: The Center for Visual Artists (CVA) is the merger of two long-standing Greensboro community visual arts agencies, The Center for Creative Arts (est. 1965) and the Greensboro Artists' League (est. 1956). These organizations joined forces in 2005 to form a comprehensive art education center that encompasses both arts education and art exhibition.
